On the Ground in Cuba: The Myths and Facts of Trading Today

The U.S. has done much to liberalize trade with Cuba over the past year but a general embargo remains in place. ST&R's Lenny Feldman, who recently met with Cuban business experts in Havana, will debunk the myths and provide the facts about doing business in Cuba. This 60 minute webinar will cover the following key topics:

- How the import and export process works in and with Cuba
- parties allowed to trade
- required licenses or authorizations
- "cuentrapropistas" (independent entrepreneurs) and their significance
- when U.S. companies can trade with Cuba and with which companies
- products increasingly traded in Cuba
- the type of commercial presence a U.S. company can have in Cuba
- ensuring payment to or from a Cuban company
- future of the port of Mariel and its significance

Our Speaker:

This webinar will be presented by Lenny Feldman, Esq. a member of the Firm's Operating Committee. Lenny served as a senior attorney at the Office of Regulations and Rulings, CBP, from 1991-2000. In this capacity he was responsible for issuing decisions and training CBP officials enforcing the U.S. Government's sanctions programs among other trade issues. Today, Lenny serves as a strategist to numerous corporate officials on global compliance and enforcement issues. Mr. Feldman currently serves as one of 20 members of the Commercial Customs Operations Advisory Committee (COAC), where he is co-chair of the Trade Modernization Subcommittee. Mr. Feldman recently traveled to Havana, Cuba with a group of customs brokers, freight forwarders and shippers to gain "on the ground" insights into the realities of doing business in Cuba.
